DETAILED ACTIONClaim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 2, and 12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kubota in view of Seo and CORY et al.

The Kubota patent discloses a needle to contact and penetrate tissue and a device coupled to the needle, the device comprising a conductive component adapted to move to a resistive force, wherein the movement corresponds to a depth of tissue penetration.

Art Unit: 3763

Despite disclosing various embodiments having different sensing apparatuses, Kubota does not expressly disclose the operational details of these sensing mechanisms. However, the use of pressure transducers or pressure sensors having a conductive component adapted to move in response to a resistive force or pressure is conventional in the art as evidenced by the teachings of Seo. The Seo patent demonstrates that sensors using a conductive component to convert displacement or movement into electrical signals are well known. Moreover, concerning claim 12, CORY et al., discloses a needle having a depth sensor and additionally having the capability to infuse substances into the body.

Based on the above observations, for a person of ordinary skill in the art, modifying the apparatus disclosed by Kubota with a depth sensor having a conductive component as taught by Seo, and a lumen for the infusion of medicaments into the body, as taught by CORY et al., would have been considered obvious in view of the conventionality of these enhancements.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 13-19 are allowed.

Claims 3-11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

In view of the new art used in the rejections above, this office action is not a final action. Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the
